In Mancharia, too, where it was much needed there has been an abundant fall of rain lately But there is great reason to fear that there will be a good deal of distress prevailing in North China through the general shortness of the crops, and the high price of provisions will not tend to the preservation of peace and order. This will add to the thickly gathering difficulties of the Chinese Government. .I may, perhaps, be able in a measure to meet the emergency by a generous distribution of rice, but it is out of its power, it is to be feared, to do more than alleviate the wideprend suffering which a partial failure of the crops always entails upon the dense and poverty-stricken population of the Central Kingdom. At the city of Hangchow a great deal of consternation prevails. The children are, it appears, more especially singled out as victims, probably woman, with the largeny of a jade button and because the outrage is more easily and safely carried out in their case. A large charitable l institution in the city has been distributing "charms" gratis, and it is said that almost every boy and some of the men go about times before was scatteneed to six months' hard with little bits of yellow paper with some mystic characters written on them tied in the ends of their pig-tails. The modus operandi of the mischievous action is, however, a matter of secondary importance. It would be far more interesting to know who are the real originators of the movement and what their object is. The mandarins of Kiangsi are in clined to attribute it to the White Lily Messrs. The epidemic among queues has fully begun o work in this city, as well as in cities between here and Ningpo. Many persons are to be seen with the slip of yellow paper, having five myst:o characters on it, braided in the queue. Placards are posted and circulated, telling the people that persons are, by use of the black art, cutting off queues, but that they may escape the mysterious shears by wearing the If any one suffers, he may, by recutting the

And an official in Sino-sun, across the Taiont'ang River, has issued a proclamation in effect the same as the placard mentioned. Numerous cases are reported, but there are a few authenticated ones. A boy from one of the Mission Schools lost part of his quene, but knew nothing of it till be reached home. A native Obristian also saw a boy who had lost his that day. Children seem to be the principal victims. Men may be seen on the street, with their queue inside their coats, holding on to the end of it as if afraid it would take to itself wings and fly away. And occasionally, in passing the foreigner, a nervous touch is given the quene as if to be sure it had not gone off. The nutives are much excited, and say that in the reign of Tao-Kwang a similar phenomenon was witnessed, only the unknown sprite then operated on the feathered tribe. A chicken would be heard to squeel, and on running out not one would be seen, but the olicken's wings would be farmers to plant out their rice. In some found clipped.

THE MONKEY-AS A CITIZEN,

A most interesting branch of street zoology lies in the study of those animals which tween the drudges and the victims. I mean the class which includes the barrel-organ m rubbits, pigeons, and bantams in St. Andrew's street. St. Giles's; in short, all those creatures which "fancy" or science dooms to penal servitude. At the head of these, of course, in right of his near relationship to man, comes the monkey. Considered as a citizen he occupies two positions in society. He is to be met with as the professional monkey who performs on the top of a barrel organ or a round table, and also as the monkey pur et simple the member of a happy family and the most miserable brute in creation. In the latter capacity he is altogether out of his ] element, and it is only owing to his being lect that he is ever found in a position which affords no better field for his talents than nursing the albino rat or paisuing entomological inquiries in his own or the dog's tail. THE SPANISH POOR. It is "Hail fellow, well met" in this country, especially among the peasantry: and you are heartily welcome to a share of the poor man's stew. "No stew without a quotation from St. Augustine." And in this refrain you have the key to Spanish cookery-stewing and salt meat. Another proverb says :- " Every Spaniard knows how to stew;" and this is true. In the prisons of Spain it is not the cook who becomes the cook, but the man who conducts himself well, it being taken for granted that he is able to with two little-holes, each one about a foot deep and half a foot in diameter; these are called the "ornilas," or cooking stove.
